setting up an expensive six-tube. I bought one for .223 and it worked fine for the first 500 and from there it won't run continuously. I bought my from a guy on ebay who was doing and sold them. The only difference is that I have 4 tubes and the bullet feeder has 6 set up my ammunition dropper also works with my star/magma bullet lubricant. Mr Bullet feeder began selling their single tube settings and then progressed to setting up an expensive six-tube. I bought one for my .223 and it works fine. Lee sells four tube feeders and I have adopted the Hornady bullet feeder and I'm sure it can be adapted to the bullet feeder only sell the tube too: say 'size/prime a few case' when starting with progression and of putting it next to it. You can plug it back into the process when the bad/strange case screws up the priming station and the next load 02-25-25-2020, 1:23 am #20 MBF drops are the best. You won't regret it, forgive me.
